FOREWORD

" 'Tis education forms the common mind; just as the twig is bent the tree's inclined."

Drawing upon Pope's analogy equating "the twig" with youth and "the tree" with maturity, it behooves us to give serious consideration to the educational process, which does "form the common mind."

Today is a time when youth overtly questions the existing philosophies, mores, and manners of the adult establishment. Already this questioning has led to outright rebellion and complete withdrawal on the part of some of our youth. They are rejecting many established values and standards, without offering any positive substitutes, despite the fact that these same standards have raised us as individuals and a nation above the many older nations of the world. Granted, there is a need for re-evaluation and change if we are to overcome the moral, social, political, racial, and military problems which seem to comprise a major portion of our youth's inheritance. Therefore, this questioning has definite beneficial aspects. However, it must be realized that along with the right to question goes the responsibility for preserving the integrity of the individual and the nation.

Education, because it encompasses all phases of growth—moral, social, and political, must attempt to guide today's youth toward constructive self-development. At King Philip Regional High School, administration and faculty are cognizant of the questioning and critical attitudes common to all youth. They therefore adjust curriculum and policy in an effort to give their students the philosophical concepts which will enable them to formulate their own ideas, and the practical knowledge necessary for their own and the commonweal.

The 1968 Chieftain staff will endeavor to show how King Philip, through curriculum offerings, activities, sports, and special events, bends "the twig" to incline "the tree" toward positive self-realization.

" 'Tis education forms the common mind"

Progressive policy, positive administration

Superintendent Mr. David W. Eaton, and the King Philip Regional School District School Committee, constantly strive to help the King Philip secondary school to meet the demands placed upon it by institutions of higher learning, industry, labor and society in general. The ever-changing educational system, the added responsibilities of securing and disbursing NDEA funds, increased school budgets and staff changes have made the superintendent busier than ever. As the voice of the policy-making school board, he coordinates their efforts with the administrators and faculty. In order to insure a complete, up-to-date education for King Philip students, the superintendent and school committee have adopted several innovations, the most recent being a summer reading program and a summer school program for make-up or enrichment.

Pencil in hand, Superintendent Mr. David W. Eaton relaxes for a moment behind a desk heavily laden with the perpetual paper work of the King Philip school district.

are roots of learning

Receipt of the graduation program marks the close of another successful school year for Mr. Charles L. Manos, principal.

Careful curriculum planning, which helps to meet the educational, social, and civic needs of the individual student, along with the routine duties of a high school principal, require much time and effort on the part of Mr. Charles L. Manos.

Among the several tasks undertaken by Assistant Principal Mr. Walter W. White are the onerous ones of discipline and attendance. Mr. Manos and Mr. White share the responsibility for helping to make King Philip Regional High School an institution of learning equipped to prepare students for whatever they may encounter in life after high school, be it college, vocation, marriage, or service to one's country.

Every King Philip student recognizes the, ". . . and now, what do you have to say for yourself?" expression of Mr. Walter W. White, assistant principal.

Wise counsel

Secondary school students today are facing tougher and tougher competition—both quantitative and qualitative—whether they plan to enter industry, the service, or to go on to institutions of higher learning. To give the King Philip student an equal opportunity in these competitive ranks, the King Philip Regional School District has set up a guidance department of highly qualified personnel under the direction of Mr. Francis X. O'Regan.

The first responsibility of the department to the student is to provide a projected program which will best meet his needs and interests, academically and vocationally. Among the many other services included in the guidance program are those of individual counseling, provision of library catalogs, group testing of each class, and job placements.

Such able guidance, coupled with a strong curriculum, gives equal opportunity to each student in his competitive field.

Mr. Donald Cusack, guidance counselor, sets up a tape of a career lecture for Barbara Beauchemin.

guides growth

Senior class president, Robert Croswell, and guidance director, Mr. Francis X. O'Regan look up from their study of college board scores.

Yearbook photographer, Roger Eaton seeks the aid of Mrs. Marjorie Newburn, counselor in choosing college catalogues for study.

Physical well-being—

In the 1967–1968 school year, the health program has come to mean much more than merely a cabinet full of band-aids, or a couch to rest upon. Educators and students alike realize that academic and vocational guidance is futile unless the student is healthy enough to take advantage of it.

To make certain that all students are cared for healthwise, physical examinations, eye and ear tests, and regular dental checkups are given under the direction of Miss Margaret N. Keady, R.N. Miss Keady, who is also advisor to the Future Nurses' club, has the responsibility of tending to the accidents and illnesses which are regretfully part of each school.

Regular check-ups and daily care give the King Philip student a better chance to meet the physical demands of high school life.

Miss Margaret Keady, R.N. examines Kathleen Conway for a possible dislocation of the elbow.

As part of the comprehensive health program at King Philip, Thomas Maduskie has his hearing checked by Miss Keady.

the yield of constant and efficient care

Secretaries and service staffs—cafeteria workers, matron, custodians and police officer—at King Philip, though often unheralded, are as essential to the smooth working of school life as any other branch of the school personnel.

Through the efforts of these skilled people, King Philip goes about the business of secondary education smoothly and efficiently.

Principal's secretary, Mrs. Ruth M. Bailey; Superintendent's secretary, Mrs. Kathryn Sheehan; and secretaries, Mrs. Dorothy Draheim, and Mrs. Cruickshank.

Policeman: Mr. Whitman Jamieson.

Cafeteria staff: Mrs. Elizabeth DeScuillo, Mrs. Virginia Mitchell, Mrs. Velma Perry, Mrs. Lucy Wignall, Mrs. Elizabeth Treen and Mrs. Rennie Bowden.

Custodial staff: Mr. Lyle Bonney, Head Custodian, Mr. Clayton Cummings, Mr. Herbert Holske, Mr. Henry Lightfoot, and Mr. Edward Gould.

Matron: Mrs. Ingmarie Wiggin.

In Creative Writing, under the tutelage of Mrs. Eleanor R. Alter, Senior English teacher, Ismene (Maureen Golden) implores Antigone (Caren Moore) not to disregard the wishes of the king.

Communicative skills

Since Sputnik, most of the emphasis in education has been placed on math and science. The true educator, however, has always known that the teaching-learning process is useless unless the student can communicate his knowledge to others. Communicative and language arts are best developed in English classes. At King Philip, students are exposed to the best teaching in the communicative skills, written and oral, and literature. Students learn to write in the several literary forms and to express themselves orally through such media as discussion, debate, and oral class presentation. This year, to further enrich the English curriculum for interested seniors, a creative writing course was introduced, one more advancement in the continuous effort to counterbalance progress in science and technology with that of the language arts.

Mr. James Black, Chairman of the English department, lectures to a class in English Literature.

Reading and speech, like language arts, are essential if a transfer of knowledge is to accompany the actual learning process. Without reading, the basic tool for all education, it would be impossible for a student to acquire ideas and concepts. Articulate speech is one of the most important methods of exchanging these concepts.

In an effort to insure students future success in academics, the curriculum at King Philip provides for reading and speech courses which establish a firm foundation in these areas. Reading is separated into two major divisions: developmental, entailing the critical reading of various works, and development of other advanced reading skills; and remedial, which builds upon and reinforces the basic reading skills necessary for scholastic achievement. The recent addition of a reading laboratory at King Philip has made the study of all phases of reading still more interesting and rewarding.

Speech classes, through the inclusion of oral readings, impromptu speeches, pantomimes and parliamentary procedure, develop poise in students and give them confidence in oral expression.

Without the ready knowledge gained through reading skills and the self possession acquired in speech practices, even the best student will not realize his full potential.

are the trunk of the tree of knowledge

Miss Suzanne Person, speech teacher and drama coach; explains the use of lighting to students.

Mr. Steven Besaw, Miss Deborah Rourke, Mr. Charles Velnosky, Miss Bette Wolf, Mrs. Diane Lubow, Miss Joan Barron (student teacher), and Mr. Robert Houde teach English in grades 9-12.

Mrs. Alice Church, director of reading; works with Gail Waldron in the reading laboratory.

Cultural insight–

Mr. Dean Webb, Mr. Thomas Lerra, Miss Suzanne Person, Miss Janna Bremer, Mr. William Brennan and Mr. John Dwyer teach social studies.

Miss Clara Manteca, chairman of the social studies department; works with Patricia O'Brien.

Social Studies, the study of human experience from cave man to the Space Age, is an integral part of every student's schedule at King Philip. Course offerings in geography, citizenship education, world, United States and modern European history, and problems of democracy give the student a physical, political, cultural, economic, and social knowledge basic to the necessary understanding of the constant changes which nations undergo today.

At King Philip in 1967–1968, as in every other school year, the social studies curriculum is subject to constant revision and expansion in an effort to keep abreast of the many happenings at home and abroad.

For the second consecutive year, Mr. Frank Gallipeau, history teacher and A.V.A. director; was chosen to participate in a Social Studies Institute.

the olive branch of unity

In a world where an understanding among nations can mean the difference between war and peaceful coexistence, the study of foreign languages is indispensable. It is imperative that we learn not only how other people speak, but also how they think. The foreign language program at King Philip helps to convey this knowledge to students. Courses in the tongues of Ancient Rome, France, Germany, Russia, and Spain offer excellent language instruction, as well as a study of the literature traditions and daily lives of the people of these nations.

The new language laboratory improves pronunciation, comprehension, and fluency through individual, monitored practice. With the addition of the laboratory the foreign language program at King Philip now offers to every student an opportunty to be fluent as well as knowledgeable in the foreign language of his choice.

Spanish teacher, Mrs. Katherine Hadjiyannis spent the summer in Spain as a member of the Foreign Language Institute.

Mrs. Lorna Russell (French); Mrs. Priscilla Johnson (French, Spanish), and Mr. Robert Murphy (French, German, Russian) teach the language and customs of foreign lands.

Ancient Roman artifacts and clothing are discussed by Mrs. Lucy Costello, Latin teacher; and Patricia O'Brien, Latin Club consul.

Mrs. Mildred Wallace, French department chairman; monitors student pronunciation drills.

Fulbright exchange scholar, Mr. Ram Nath Lall, has an opportunity to compare teaching methods here with those of his homeland.

Miss Genevieve Szczepaniak will earn a master's degree in a three year Mathematics Institute at the University of New Mexico.

Technological advancements

Mathematics is taught at various levels to King Philip students by Mr. William Lepere, Miss Margaret Flaherty, Mr. Robert Perry, and Mrs. Lydia Fisher.

Immeasurable importance should be placed upon the instruction of mathematical and scientific concepts in the secondary school today. With outer space and underwater exploration, the creation of artificial organs to replace diseased ones, advancements in computer technology, and the possibility of creating life in the test tube, the math-science program at secondary level must offer courses which will meet the needs of the student who must live in this science-oriented world.

In line with this thinking, in depth and advanced courses are offered in the math and science studies at King Philip. Courses range from general math and science to calculus and advanced laboratory sciences, which include biology, chemistry, and physics. All students must complete a basic math and science program; college-bound students, in following the sequentially developed curriculum are prepared to undertake further study in these areas.

Mr. Edward Morgan, department chairman; awards a certificate to Robert Croswell, who placed first among the King Philip students participating in the annual Mathematics Association of America contest.

determine world progress

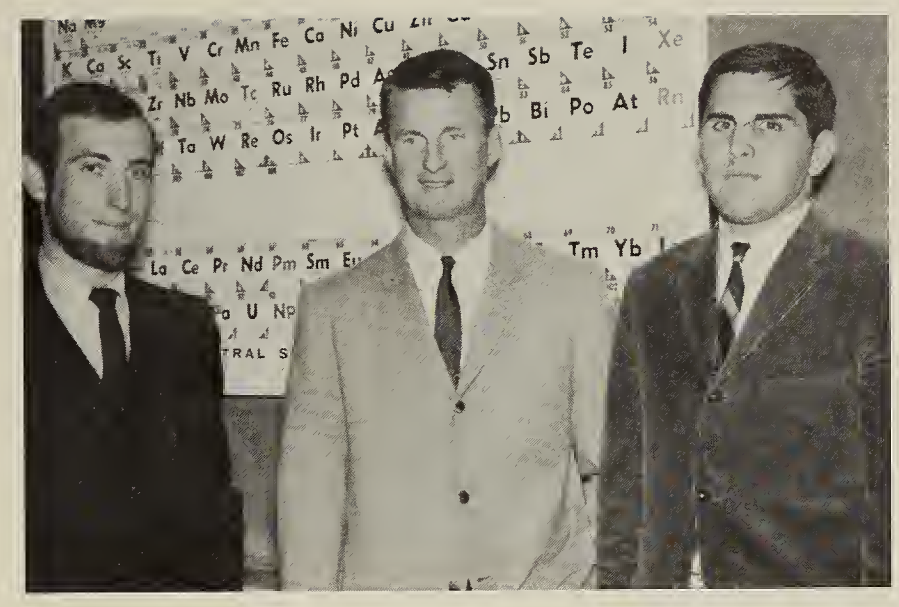
Mr. Brian O'Connor attended the Science Institute at Sonoma State College in San Francisco.



Mr. Anthony Cowl, Mr. Peter Sullivan, and Mr. Robert LaRaia teach science to King Philip undergraduates.

Biology and chemistry are subjects taught by Mr. Charles Vaillancourt, Mr. Harry Burry, and Mrs. Margaret Casper.

As Stephen Geishecker and Peter DaVia look on, department chairman and physics teacher, Mr. Joseph Cormier assists Robert Carlson with a problem in advanced physics.

Aesthetic enrichment

Like all other departments at King Philip, the library, which is, to quote Mr. Charles L. Manos, principal, the "heart of the school," makes constant changes in an effort to meet the needs of the high school student. Each year new books, periodicals and reference materials are purchased, making the library the best in the King Philip District.

King Philip librarian, Mrs. Winona LoGrasso.

Director of Music, Mr. Raymond Hill leads a choral group at choir practice.

This year, Mr. Raymond Hill, director of music, added a course in music theory to the already excellent music program at King Philip. The addition of this course provides the theoretical background for practical instruction of music appreciation, giving the student a fuller knowledge of this art.

Miss Susan Tellis, teacher of art, shows a watercolor to a King Philip parent, Mrs. Martucci.

To encourage originality and self-expression in creative art, the art curriculum becomes a center where the King Philip student is taught artistic modes and media, and is given an acquaintance with the masters and periods of art.

Art students come to use the various media as a channel of expression for creative thought. King Philip is indebted to many of them for the annual Christmas window, posters, and other decorative displays which help to beautify the school.

Business—a practical branch of learning

With industry and business becoming more and more important in the modern economic system, the need for good clerks, typists, bookkeepers, and secretaries is high. At King Philip, business students receive the best instruction in all business fields—typing, shorthand, transcription, the use of office machines, bookkeeping, and business law.

For business students, a new laboratory in which they learn shorthand transcription with the aid of electronic equipment has been installed. A new course incorporating typing and notehand in one year is currently a part of the program for the college-bound student, who needs these skills for notetaking and research papers, or for part-time employment.

These curriculum improvements are illustrative of the constant effort on the part of the King Philip business department to keep in step with current trends in business education.

Mrs. Elizabeth Tolley, business teacher, watches Jean DiBattista run the adding machine.

Business teachers: Mrs. Rita Tokaz and Mrs. Cecilia Murphy smile pleasantly.

When you hear yelling, screaming, showers running, balls bouncing, feet pounding, the crack of a bat meeting the ball or the sound of music, you know you are in the vicinity of King Philip's gym. With fine facilities and equipment for both boys and girls the gymnasium is one of the most popular places in the school. Here, all students participate in a program of exercises for physical fitness, gymnastics for poise and balance, and games and dances for the development of coordination and rhythm.

Despite aggressive defense, John Greene manages to squeeze off a jump shot in an intramural basketball game.

Mr. Michael Cosentino, athletic director; is capably assisted by Mr. Thomas Hartley, physical education instructor and head basketball coach.

Physical strength

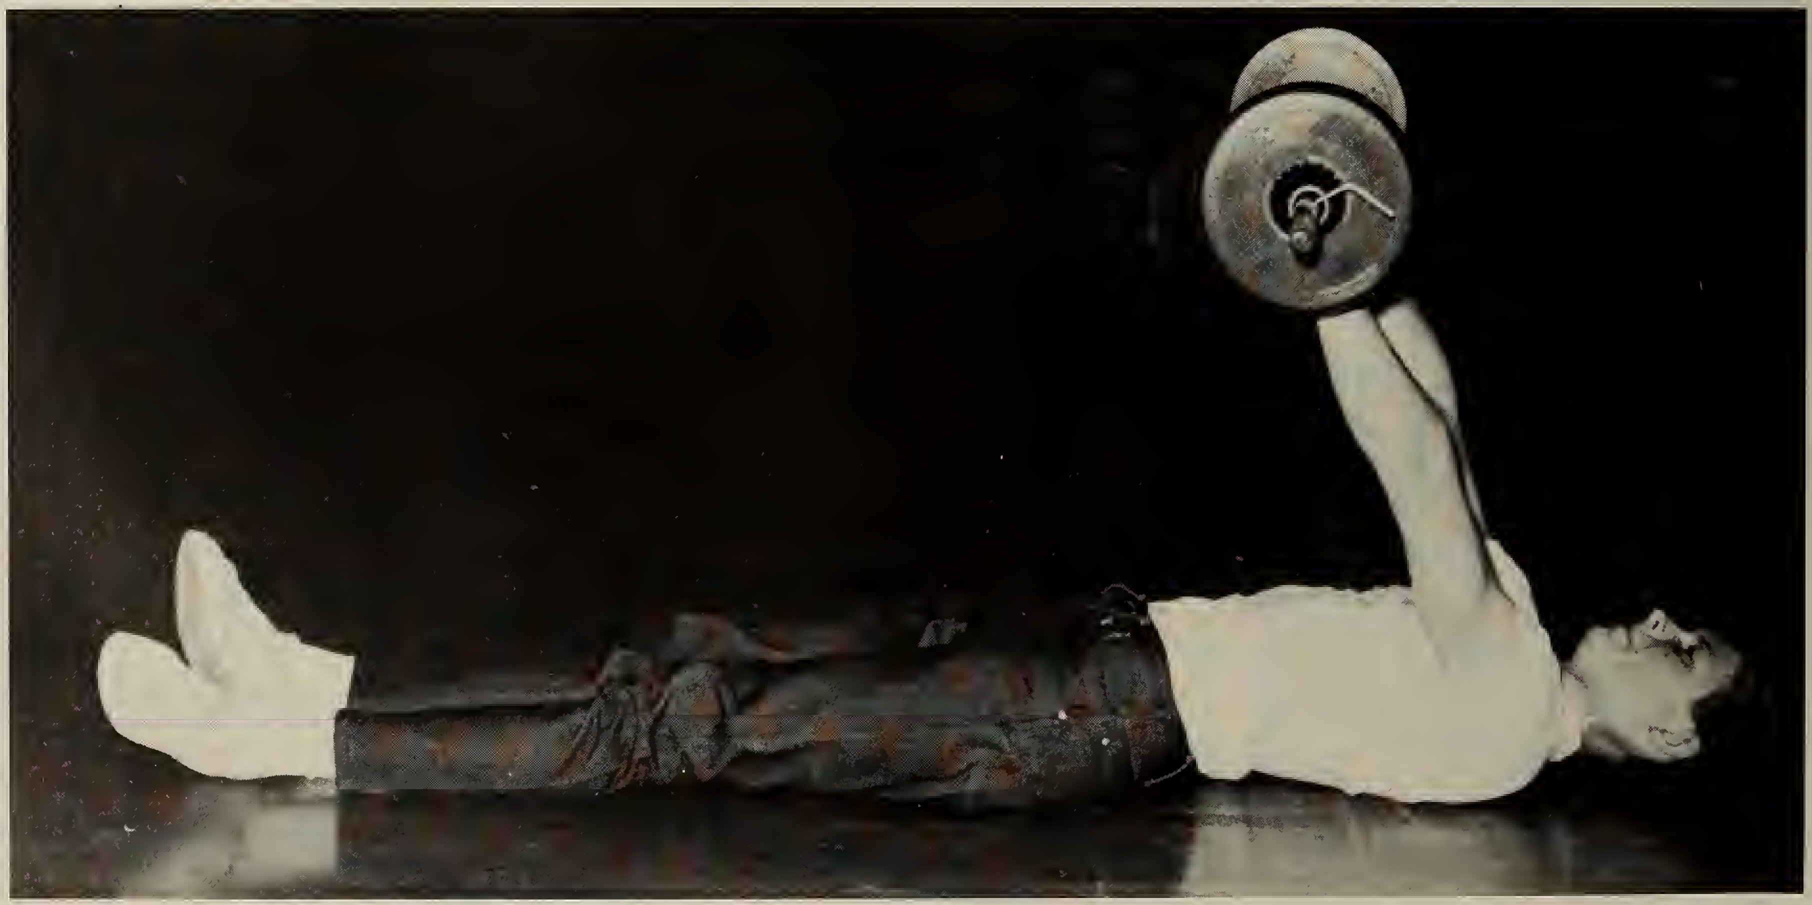
Weight lifting, as demonstrated by Raymond Fisher, is a strenuous activity in the physical fitness program at King Philip.



Miss Bonnie Blackman and Miss Marcia Connors, girls' physical education instructors; enjoy teaching field hockey, a popular fall sport.

Every physical education class at King Philip opens with a regimented program of calisthenics.

through exercise

Preparing for an archery drill, George Bernier, Carolyn Watson, and Margaret Patton choose their arrows with care.

William Allen watches as Gregory Travers and Alan Brown, in a vigorous game of volleyball, leap to spike the ball.

Practical skills further

During a home economics open house, Aline Pelletier serves tea to Mrs. Pauline Pfeffer, department chairman; and Mrs. Margaret Stahl, culinary arts instructor.

Girls at King Philip get practicum and theory in home economics. Vocational and regular home economics students learn to fashion clothing from "Simplicity to Vogue". They learn both plain and gourmet cooking and the etiquette of the hostess. The highlight of the home economics department is the fashion show which is held in the spring of every year. Every girl, whether planning a career as a homemaker, businesswoman, or college student, needs to know the practical arts taught in this department.

Home economics students Kathleen Laughman, Deborah Menzel, Elaine Evans, Carolyn Hodson, Arlene Doyle, Dawn Nelson, and Linda Johnson present the "mod" styles of the year.

academic knowledge

Architects, draftsmen, engineers, and technicians—all must have at least a basic knowledge of mechanical drawing. At King Philip, this knowledge is offered through a sequentially developed course of study ranging from simple geometric constructions to complex industrial design. This course is popular among both college preparatory math and science enthusiasts, and students planning for practical vocations.

Invaluable experience is gained in wood and metal shop classes, where boys are taught the proper techniques for usage of carpentry and metal-working tools and materials.

All industrial arts courses prove worthwhile, whether undertaken in preparation for further studies in this field, or as terminal experiences.

Apprenticeship leads

For students interested in and adept at carpentry and machine shop, King Philip's Vocational department provides an excellent program offering both classroom instruction and practical experience.

Carpentry students receive valuable training for their trade each year when they build a complete house for a family in the King Philip District.

Machine shop students learn welding, tool and dye making, and casting. All vocational students alternate shop sessions with the academic classroom. The combined academic and practical instruction prepares the vocational student for apprenticeship in his chosen work, or for further study in technical schools.

Mr. Edward Tousignant, Mr. Antone Cabral, Mr. Fred Tabor, Mr. Raymond Harding, and Mr. Arthur Hart are the capable vocational department instructors.

Special needs satisfied

Mr. Albert Taylor, special education teacher; is new to the King Philip faculty this year.

Special education students work at individual ability levels in academic studies and in the special areas of home economics, industrial arts and physical education. They also engage in the activities and sports in which they are interested.

1967–1968 is a banner year for driver education at King Philip. After several years with a program confined to classroom instruction, the high school has acquired a dual control training automobile to be used for on-the-road lessons. The now complete course has created such interest that Mr. Francis Gallipeau, A.V.A. director, has joined Mr. John Robbins, chairman of business department, on the driver education staff in order to handle the large class enrollment.

Academic attainment—

In a casual moment, Senior Honor Society member, Virginia Coughlan sidewalk-superintends the art work of senior, Caren Moore.

Senior Honor Society members undertook a new and timely project this year, that of sending Christmas packages to King Philip graduates serving in Viet Nam. This is in addition to other projects undertaken by this selective group. The members run cake sales to raise funds for scholarships and gifts to selective charities.

Membership in the Senior Honor Society is based upon high scholastic achievement, combined with good character, good citizenship and a penchant for service and leadership. Members, in accordance with individual interest, are active in student government, academic clubs, service organizations, and varsity sports.

a positive inclination

1967 Honor Society president Thomas Wadleigh presents an Honor Society pin to David Morriss.

Edith Cook, Anne Thornton, Linda Fuller, and Nancy Howard watch for prospective customers during an Honor Society cake sale.

Junior Honor Society has been exceptionally busy this year with cake sales and balloon sales to raise money for the scholarship fund and for the annual Christmas packages which are sent to the needy in the school district. Voluntary tutoring of fellow students in academic difficulty is a year round project for these capable scholars.

In honor of the society namesake, Helen Keller, plans, still in the discussion stage, for rendering some kind of service to the blind, are underway.

Training in government

Student Council representatives busy themselves with the setting up and running of class elections, raising funds, running a profitable school store and sponsoring school events.

Among the most successful financial endeavors in 1968 were the newly innovated computer dance, Sadie Hawkins Day, and the Student Talent Show.

Junior Virginia Mackey takes an active part in the talent show.

Senior Peter DaVia, president of the Student Council, registers Shirley Blaisdell to vote in the class elections.

roots of democracy

Political Science Club members, striving for a better understanding of the principles of democracy and the workings of the government, listen to informed speakers, watch movies and visit governmental establishments.

One of the most politically knowledgeable speakers, State Senator John Quinlan gave a talk on "Youth and Its Active Role in Today's Government." Fulbright exchange teachers from India, Mr. Ram Nath Lall and Mr. Joseph Fernandes, compared and contrasted the government at home and in the United States.

The programs presented give these club members a valuable knowledge beyond that to be learned in the classroom.

Senior Leah MacDonnell, president of the Political Science Club, presides over a Planning Board Meeting.

Senator John Quinlan of Massachusetts speaks to the Political Science Club.

Members of the Political Science Club, Caren Moore, Emory Rounds, Valerie Robson, Roger Eaton, Miss Clara Manteca, advisor and social studies chairman; Leah MacDonnell, president; Marilyn Baima, treasurer; Gail Waldron, secretary; Kenneth Mayer, Kenneth Dunn, Nancy Howell, vice president; Jeffrey Morrill, Maureen McBrien, David Dore, Paul Cobb, and Peter Santoro take an active interest in both state and local government.

Marcia Bergman acted as mistress of ceremonies at the pre-game bonfire.

Professional careers

Virginia Mackey, Future Teacher, concentrates on her studies.

Today, with more students than ever before able to go on to higher education because of grants and loans, more and greater emphasis is being placed upon education. In order to meet this onrush of students, more and better teachers are needed. As more teachers are needed, more students studying for careers in education are needed. To interest students in teaching careers, the Future Teachers of America Organization of King Philip presents programs designed to encourage interest in this field and to provide actual experience for its members. In June of this year, seniors will be permitted to observe and take over elementary and secondary classes in schools of the district.

that satisfy needs

Constance Knauber, Judith Petrillo, Tatyana Kotuszenko and Marsha Alsworth wear gay costumes at the festivities which highlighted their Christmas party for the patients at Pondville Hospital in Norfolk.

Marsha Alsworth, president; Constance Knauber, ex-officio, Linda Holt, treasurer; and Barbara Barnes, vice-president; are the 1967–1968 officers of Future Nurses.

Today the demand for nurses is at its peak. Everywhere you look appeals are being made for more qualified nurses. Ever increasing numbers of interested students are needed to be trained to fill these empty positions. Since careers in nursing require academic backgrounds, an organization for high school students—Future Nurses of America provides a training ground for students interested in nursing as a career. At King Philip the students get practical experience by way of volunteer service at Pondville Hospital. During the course of the school year the "future nurses" give many hours individually and collectively to this service.

Mrs. Cecilia Murphy, business teacher and advisor; Judith Petrillo, Christine Leppert, Christie-Lee Rogers, Karen Partridge, Tatyana Kotuszenko, Kathleen O'Brien, Cynthia Speer, Deborah Larrabee, Janice Greer, Miss Margaret Keady R.N., advisor; Linda Holt, Barbara Barnes, Marsha Alsworth, Cheryl Skinner, and Constance Knauber recognize the need for nurses.

French Club officers: Linda Fuller, treasurer; Barbara Ross, vice-president; Patricia O'Brien, president; and Barbara Barnes, secretary; conduct the meeting entirely in French.

Social practice leads

In 1967–68 the French Club conducted all meetings in French. Incorporated into the program of the monthly meetings were filmstrips, games, refreshments and reports by eight members who participated in an overseas program in France this summer.

The social event of the year was the Christmas party, a combined effort with the Spanish, German-Russian, and Latin Clubs. It provided the opportunity for the members to compare our Christmas customs with those of foreign lands.

Members of the French club find that meetings, in addition to being enjoyable, give them an insight into the lives and customs of the French people which could not be gained by mere classroom instruction in the language.

Students who participated in a six weeks study in France with Mrs. Mildred Wallace, chaperone and language department head are: Deborah Bond, Mary Mavrides, Susan Fenton, Douglas Olsen, Paula Carr, Diane Doiron, Catherine Langley, Barbara Ross, and Joan Baxter.

to fluent expression

One among the four foreign language clubs at King Philip is the Spanish Club, best known perhaps for its annual contribution of the pinata to the language clubs Christmas party. Spanish is the language spoken at the regular meetings. Topics of current, national and international interest are reported upon and discussed.

To the delight of the foreign language club guests, Robert Croswell smashes the pinata with aplomb.

Singing Christmas carols in Spanish at the Foreign Language Christmas party are; Marilyn Kaine, Marie Miconi, Joan Grzenda, Kenneth Mayer, Virginia Mackey, Christine Dalghren, Mr. Anthony Cowl, Mrs. Katherine Hadjiyannis, Jonathan Washburn, Antone Friere, Neil Davin, and Glenn Washburn.

Cheryl Skinner, Kenneth Mayer, treasurer; Marilyn Kaine, vice-president; Marie Miconi, president; Virginia Mackey, secretary; Sandra Ravinski, Jane Betts, Annette Blair, Glenn Washburn, Jonathan Washburn, Christine Dalghren, Daniel Tower, Mrs. Katherine Hadjiyannis, advisor; Neil Davin, Joan Grzenda, Kristine Green, Gwenn Wambolt, and Joanne Howell study Spanish culture.

Old world culture

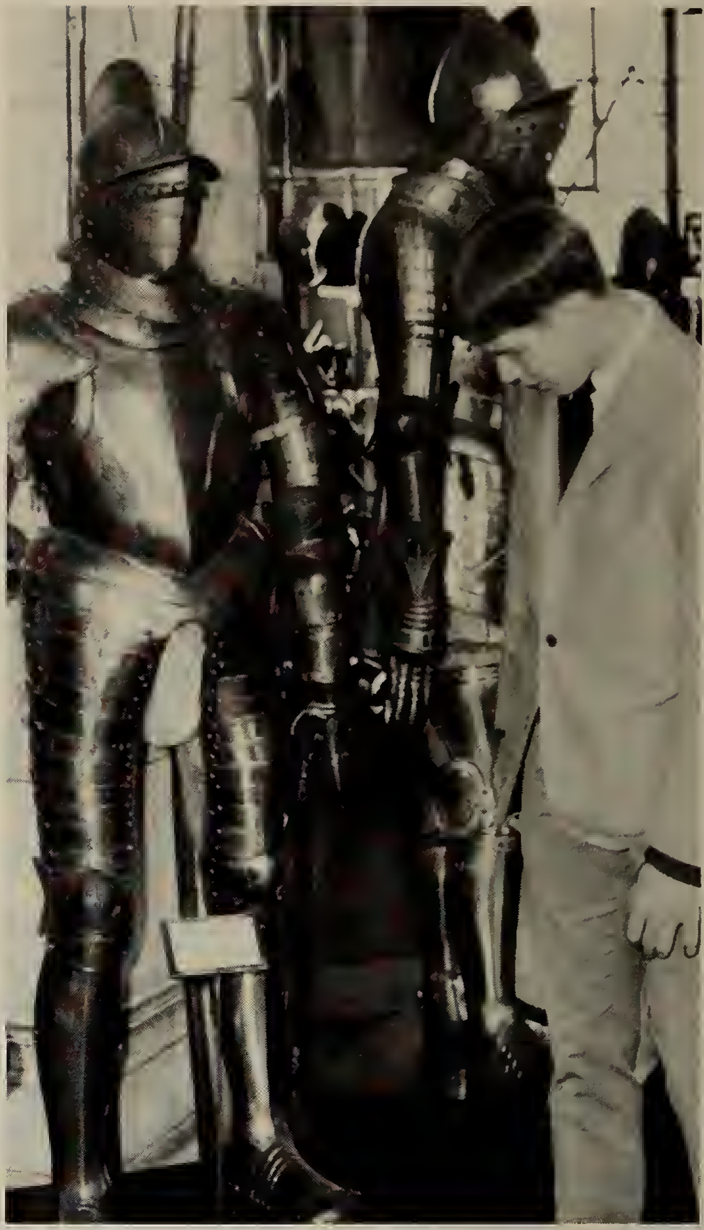
Costumed as a Roman maiden, Patricia O'Brien listens to Mrs. Lucy Costello's description of a Roman building and catapult.



On a visit to Higgins Armor Museum, Senior consul Howard Haase examines an old suit of armor.

By way of reports assigned to two Leaguers for each meeting, Junior Classical League members learn to relate the culture of an ancient civilization to our modern society. Meetings are conducted in the manner of the old Roman State with consuls, quaestors, aediles, and a scribe as officers.

Saturnalia, the great Roman festival is celebrated according to ancient custom with the costume, games, and foods peculiar to the occasion.

and modern language

Understanding, the first step to unity, is one of the objectives of today's youth. In the German-Russian culture club, it is the main objective. Members strive to learn more about the backgrounds and cultures of Germany and Russia and to comprehend their position in world affairs through which include a comprehensive study of the history of Russia and of modern day Germany. Preparing reports and going on trips to exhibits where examples of German and Russian cultures are shown begin to break through the barrier of communication which separates the foreign cultures from ours.

dramatic and creative talent

King Philip is fortunate to have many talented artists as members of the 1967–68 Art Club. As an individual, each seeks to improve upon his own technique and enjoys this freedom of expression. The Art Club bedecks the halls of King Philip with seasonal scenes, portraits and abstract art work, which both decorated the school and developed student interest and appreciation. The Senior Play scenery, dance posters and decorations, showcases and club art work are just a few of the generous contributions of the Art Club.

and services

A.V.A. and Library Council members are indispensable service organizations for the students at King Philip. Without the services of the A.V.A. boys who operate moving picture, opaque, and overhead projectors, tape recorders and record players, and light the stage for all school events, King Philip teachers and students would miss much that enhances classroom lessons and public entertainment.

Library councilors catalog books, stack shelves, mend books, and check books in and out. Their services allow time for Mrs. Winona LoGrasso, librarian; to order new books and to help students with research assignments.

Spirit, confidence, and teamwork

King Philip Fightin' Warriors 1967 season marked the first time in six years that the spirited eleven have defeated arch-rival Franklin in the traditional Turkey Day Classic. The enthusiasm of the student body, as well as that of the entire team, propelled the Fightin' Warriors to a 7–0 victory. The second period score, which came on a pass to Senior John Macaione from Senior quarterback Stephen Lynch, was the margin of victory. The extra point attempt was made by Sophomore Thomas Vine.

spirited and talented

Trailing early in the Sharon game the "fighting warriors", after losing several one-run ballgames early in the season, came up with the big inning to tie up the game at four apiece. In the eighth inning they got a couple of insurance runs. In the bottom of the eighth Jeffrey Morrill, the second pitcher of the afternoon, got himself into trouble. With no pitchers left, Coach Michael Cosentino called on the third baseman, Richard Preston, who retired the last six batters to face him. This surprising performance gave King Philip an upset win of 6–4.

open spring season

King Philip trackmen depended chiefly upon the performances of Dana Hill, David Power, and John Macaione to rack up points for the team. Dana Hill, a school record holder, ran the mile in 4:29.9. Three-lettermen David Power and John Macaione turned in impressive times in their respective events. Power, in his first season on the cinders, was a high scorer in both the mile and two mile events. Macaione, also a first-year man set the school record in the low hurdles at 14.5 seconds.

Despite the superior performances of these boys and a strong team win over our arch-rival Mansfield, the season was a disappointing one.

At full speed, John Macaione begins a record-breaking broad jump.

Four-letterman and high scorer, David Power takes the high jump in the Foxboro track meet.

Golf and cross-country teams

Sophomores Thomas Vine and John Renner were the Palmer and Nicklaus of King Philip during the 1967 golf season. Their proficiency on the fairway played an important role in the big team victory over nemesis Bishop Feehan, and afforded a bright spot in an otherwise dismal season.

look for better seasons

Captain David Power, in his second season on the trail, made several bids in the opening meets to break the ribbon in record time. In the North Attleboro meet, the last one for Power at King Philip, he made a last desperate effort despite freezing temperatures and high winds only to fail by seconds. Richard Sevigney, a sophomore in his first season, rarely missed finishing second. Although these two boys provided a powerful one-two punch, the season was an unsuccessful one record-wise.

In the ten years under the coaching of Mr. John Dwyer, the King Philip varsity tennis team has never suffered a losing season. 1967 was no exception, as co-captains Sherwood Haskins and Robert Croswell, and star sophomore Rainier Baumann led the team to an impressive 12 wins, 5 losses overall record.

"Match 3-2" won the Bellingham trophy for co-captains Robert Croswell and Sherwood Haskins, and the 1967 tennis team.

Time out for groovin'

Dancing on a crowded floor is sometimes difficult but K.P. students don't seem to mind.

Dennis McLean's and Karen Kelly's entrancing conversation is not disrupted by the Sadie Hawkins photographer.

Jo Anne Howell "skates" at the hop.

Judith Ravinski and Sandra Ravinski marvel at the "bubble-blowing" prowess of Theresa Cannon at the Sadie Hawkins dance.

DECEMBER 7+8

Mother is distraught when she learns that her little masquerade has been exposed.

Leaving words for deeds, Diana and Isabelle grapple over the interchange of insults.

“The smell of the greasepaint”

Isabelle is given a “true analysis” of Hugo’s character when Madame DesMortes compares him to a “very pretty but entirely wicked . . . old . . . woman!”

Frederick is crestfallen when Diana pretends that she doesn’t recognize him.

"While visions of sugar plums danced in their heads"

Snowflakes and a Christmas tree were the seasonal setting for the second annual Christmas Ball. Buffet dining, dancing to the music of the Blenders, and the coronation of Cheryl Skinner as queen, highlighted the holiday event.

John Bergman, co-captain for the 1968 football team, dances around the Christmas tree with Sarah Valentine.

"Musical moments and

Mr. Raymond Hill is the vigorous director of the choir at the concert.

Stephanie Weaver and Cynthia Green are the solemn choir singers.

Choir members raise their voices in a rendition of "Born Free."

holiday highlights"

On Tuesday, December 19, 1967, the annual Christmas concert—"Musical Moments and Holiday Highlights"—was presented in the King Philip High School auditorium. Under the direction of Mr. Dennon and Mr. Hill, the band and choir offered a program ranging from popular tunes to traditional Christmas carols. Parents, students, and friends from the school district enjoyed the melodic efforts of the high school band and choir.

Pianist Jeanne Wright, assisted by Nancy Howell, accompanies the choir in many songs.

Mr. Edward Dennon directs the band for the grand finale.

Clarinetists, Lenore Mayer, Howard Shangraw and Martin Lillis add their resonant tones to the annual rendition of the old classic, "Silver Bells."

Nancy Howard played the piccolo obligato during the performance of the "Stars and Stripes Forever."

Even the mini-skirt, modeled here by Kathleen Faille in the presence of a tiny onlooker, has its place at King Philip.

Fashion parade

Color and the mini-skirt were the predominating features of the annual fashion show. The clothing—from informal school dress to evening gowns—modeled by the home economics girls showed craftsmanship and knowledge of style and material. The audience was as appreciative of the showing as if it were a presentation by Gernreich or Pucci.

Martha Shangraw adds a classic touch to the annual King Philip fashion show.

Color and design

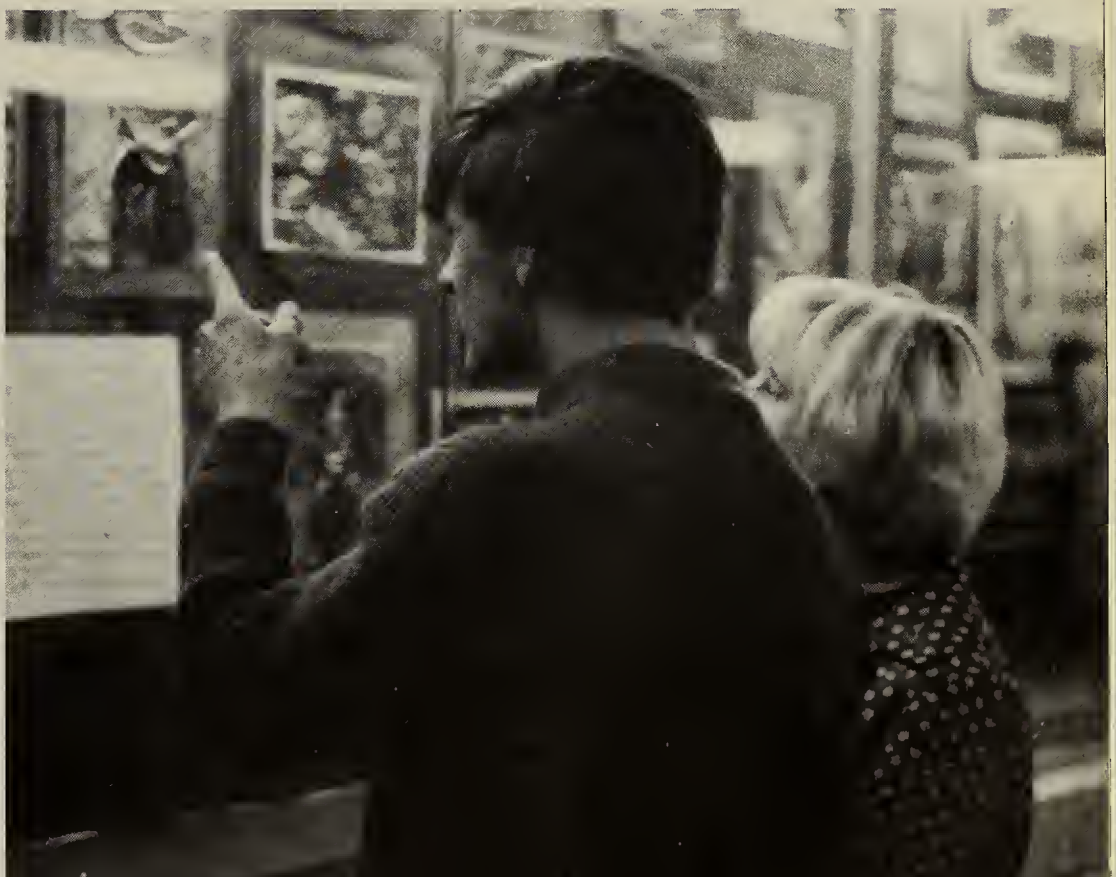
May was the month for King Philip's annual art show, an event which attracts the interest of many parents and students. This is the one time during the school year when all are given a chance to enjoy the creative talents of the art students. Work displayed ranged from the old standard crayons and oils to the psychedelic collage which defied interpretation by the uninitiated.

Miss Tellis, art director, sits proudly in front of a still-life which she contributed to the annual Art Show.

An interested spectator, caught in a contemplative mood, studies the scratch boards.

Foil creations hold the attention of two visitors to the Art Show.



Patricia O'Brien. queen. holds court with Caren Moore. Lynn Dynan. Mary Chabot. and Marcia Bergman on Paradise Isle.

Paradise

Diners Carla Alsworth. Gregory Grant. Paula DeLaiarro. Peter DaVia. Virginia Mackey. and Robert Carlson are ready to be served.

Isle

Seniors, Virginia Coughlan and Stephen Thibodeau typify the dignity of the couples at the Junior Prom.

Beneath the shimmering stars and swaying palms of "Paradise Isle," Queen Patricia O'Brien reigned with her attendants at the Junior Prom. Dinner served in the best King Philip manner, dancing to the dulcet tones of Ben Lancisi's Orchestra, and the grand march promenade highlighted the evening on the simulated tropical isle.

Patricia Vine, Stephen Lynch, vice-president, Patricia O'Brien, and Robert Croswell, president, lead the grand march on "Paradise Isle."

Academic recognition

Jere Sievert lights the first of the symbolic candles—character—at the induction ceremony.

Honor Society Induction is an event anticipated by the inductees, their parents, and friends alike, not only for the honor involved but because of the solemnity and dignity of the induction ceremony itself. The lighting of candles, symbolizing the qualities inherent to membership, is an impressive and reverential addition to the ceremony.

Deborah Kelley and Donna Roderigues welcome a refreshing drink served by Nancy Howard and helper Kathleen Thibedeau.

Lambent candles behind him, William Proal addresses inductees on the qualities of service to self, school, and community.

Edith Cook pours coffee for Dr. and Mrs. Breitbart.

"Ten o'clock scholars"

Mr. and Mrs. William Coughlan, Mr. Young, and Mrs. Witherell listen to tapes in the foreign language laboratory.

Mrs. Lydia Fisher, mathematics teacher; has a favorable report for the parents of Joscelyn Varieur.

Parents' Night, an annual event at King Philip, opened with an introductory message from the administrators and a short musical program in the auditorium. Afterwards, the parents were free to visit with the various teachers to discuss the progress of their sons and daughters. This program enables the parent to appreciate more fully the efforts of the high school to educate its students.

Mr. and Mrs. Dow with son Gary and daughter Teresa visit with Mr. Raymond Hill, director of music.

Mr. Robert Murphy and Mrs. Katherine Hadjiyannis, foreign language teachers and Mr. William Dias wait to be served at the end of the school evening.

Fun and fund raising

Karen Peterson puts the final touches on the junior class float.

Freshmen chose an apt theme for their float entry.

King Philip's thrilling football victory over Seekonk was enhanced by the festivities of the Homecoming weekend. Each class contributed time and effort to produce the floats which supplemented the half-time show. The queen and her court added a regal touch both to the afternoon's activities and the post-game victory dance.

"As the twig is bent,"

Members of the Class of 1971 are in a sense an experimental group for they are the first to enter the high school from King Philip Regional School—North. Coming from the junior high, rather than directly from elementary school, the freshmen should experience less difficulty in adjusting to the self-discipline of high school.

Mr. William Brennan, social studies teacher; Mrs. Diane Lubow and Miss Deborah Rourke, English teachers; and Mr. Peter Sullivan, science teacher and head football coach; advise the Class of 1971 in its first year at King Philip.

Susan Parsons, secretary; Willis Boudreau, president; Dorothea Pazurchek, vice-president; and Donna Figaratto, treasurer; have been elected to lead the freshman class.

Freshman class council members are: Mary Ann Pasquantonio, William Christy, Deborah Carter, Jean Mitchell, Patricia Marshall, Terri Bennett, Ronald Tibbetts, and Marie Prantis.

Class of 1970—

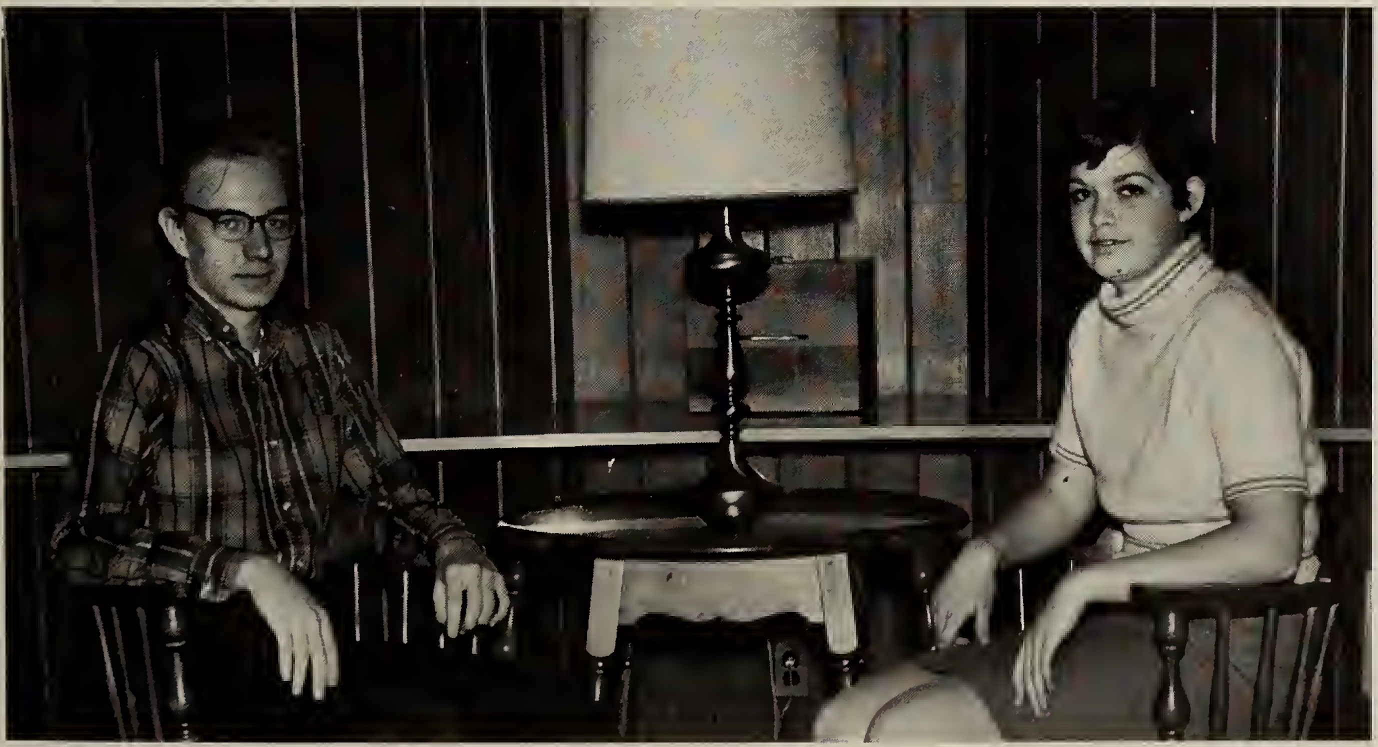
King Philip sports fans look to the Class of 1970 to bring honor to the school on the playing fields. At tenth grade level the class can already boast of having in their midst three varsity football players, four varsity basketball players, two golfers and a tennis player.

Lest one wonder, these sophomores, in true King Philip tradition, hold their own in the academic and social realms.

King Philip expects a full realization of the athletic prowess and academic potential within this class to come to full fruition within the next two years.

Sophomore class officers: Lucille Gaudreau, secretary; Albert Figaratto, president; Linda Viola, treasurer; and Susan Lukk, vice-president; with mascot have planned an exciting year of events.

Advisors to the sophomore class: Miss Bette Wolf, English teacher; Mr. Brian O'Connor, science teacher; and Mr. John Dwyer, social studies teacher; help plan and supervise all class activities.



David Faucett and Lizbeth Breitbart have been awarded both gold and silver honor keys for high academic achievement.

Members of the

As juniors, members of the class of 1969 set the pace and the pattern for underclassmen to emulate. At the same time, they must prepare for the responsibilities which will be theirs as seniors. The junior year—an important year in the life of each class member—is a year in which initiative and leadership must be emphasized, and scholastic achievement must reach its high point.

Mrs. Katherine Hadjiyannis, Spanish teacher; and Miss Genevieve Szczepaniak, mathematics teacher; are the 1967-1968 advisors to the Junior Class.

Our inspiration

In the course of six years, the 1967 Seniors have made their presence felt. They are proud of having inaugurated the first Christmas Ball and of having the first float for the Homecoming weekend. Scholastically they boast of two merit scholars and seven letters of commendation for high scores on the National Merit Scholarship qualifying test. In athletics several hold Varsity letters in one or more sports. For the first time in the history of the school a senior Boys' State representative was chosen to represent Massachusetts at Boys' Nation in Washington D.C.

The initiative and achievement attested to by the high school record would seem to point toward a full realization of the social, intellectual, and vocational potential of the class as a whole.

Catherine Langley, National Merit finalist, pours at the Senior Honor Society Alumni Tea.

Seniors now . . .

Wrentham Boys' State delegate Sherwood Haskins receives a varsity tennis certificate from coach Mr. John Dwyer.

Maureen Golden and English instructor Mr. Steven Besaw stop for a chat in the corridor.

and then

Would Caesar have envied the "gams" of "betogaed" William Easterbrooks?

Did these serious Maester-singers grow up to become sophisticated balladeers?

Would you believe that this petite bespectacled miss is our glamour girl Marie Miconi?

And he grew, and grew, and grew until he became captain of the team and class president.

EPILOGUE

1968 Chieftain staff members hope that their photo-journalism is a cogent depiction of the effort made at King Philip Regional High School to provide "twigs" with the opportunity to satisfy their eagerness for knowledge and find solutions to their questions concerning the world "establishment." Ideally, these solutions will lead to constructive criticism and change of individual and group philosophies.

Positive thought and action should allow the "twig" to enjoy a rewarding life as an individual entity within the realm of orderly society. For " 'tis education forms the common mind; just as the twig is bent, the tree's inclined."

and pride for K.P.

King Philip in Action, an annual event begins an evening with songs, dances, and other performances from the language, business, reading, and music departments. As the evening goes on the program moves to the gym where exhibitions from the boys' and girls' gym teams are given. Later everyone proceeds to the cafeteria where projects from vocational, art, home economics, history, science, and math departments are displayed. Each year K.P. in Action has drawn more people and has become a main event of the school year.

Visitors look on as Mr. Tobar, vocational instructor, explains the various charts and projects displayed.
